Nurse Led Follow Up for patients with Myeloid Disorders

Information for patients

Your Haematology Team, which consists of your specialist doctors, clinical nurse specialist and pharmacist, would like to offer you a support service.

We aim to provide a service which enhances your care and is responsive to your needs.

Our service offers support which could help you to avoid a visit to the hospital. It means that you will be assessed fully by the nurse for myeloid disorders who has expertise in haematology.

Your nurse will assess your symptoms and be able to give you the psychological and social support you and/or your carer may need. This assessment will be carried out either by telephone, video or in the clinic. This does not mean that your hospital visits will have to stop. For example, you may wish to see your specialist doctor and nurse at every other visit. You can, of course, continue to have all your follow up appointments with your specialist.

Your specialist doctors and your nurse work closely together, which means there will be a rapid response if you need any help. If you have any problems the nurse will be able to contact your specialist doctors for advice. If necessary an urgent appointment can be made for you.

Your nurse will work with your GP or other people involved in your care if required.

For more information about video and telephone appointments, see our leaflet 'Video and Telephone Appointments' available at

Why are we offering you this service?

- To reduce your visits to the hospital.
- To allow a full assessment of your condition.
- So you can keep in contact with the nurse who will provide continuing support to you and/or your carer(s) for any aspect of your cancer care.
- To keep a swift access to your specialists.

What happens now?

You will be sent an appointment time for your initial assessment.

My circumstances at home have changed. How can you support my carer/family?

We can help with the many changes in your home circumstances which might happen because of your disease. We have access to charities, voluntary organisations, community nursing teams, and social services and can contact them at short notice.

We can also help with support for your carers, whether it is for advice, guidance or simply to listen. We can discuss your condition with your carer if you give us permission to do so and we can also offer your carer practical solutions to problems within your home.

I have just had a test and have seen my consultant but don't understand the results – can I contact you for further information?

Yes, you can contact your nurse to discuss the results of any test or investigations. If you need to discuss the results with your specialist doctor we can arrange an appointment.
